Cambridge Policemen Give

They appeared before Judge Almon C. Chamberlain, District Court, Cambridge, today sentenced to one year each in the House of Correction.

The plaintiff was Osgood Hooker of San Francisco, a son of C. I. Hooker, a well-known banker and broker.

In pronouncing sentences, Judge Almy said:

able matters that has ever come before men in my entire experience. There has always been the presumption that politicians were honest, and my experience has borne out that presumption.

BIG BUILDING BOOM HEADS TOWARD ENGLAND, SAYS TUTTLE

WOMEN FOR MANY WORKERS

It is not a question of a big building boom coming here; it is already here. Those who get in early will avoid the rush.

This was the statement made today by Morton C. Tuttle, general manager of the Anshar Construction Company, with main offices at No. 27 School street. He was commenting on the Boston American's "Build Now" campaign, and in doing so he remarked that his firm has more prospective business at present than at any time in the existence of the company, which is twenty-five years old.

General Manager Tuttle's optimism was borne out by men interested in the building trade throughout the city, and while many declined to make a prediction, the consensus of opinion was that Boston and Massachusetts and New England as a whole would be on the "boom" with busy building construction before the end of the present season.

BOOM ALREADY HERE.
"There is a big building boom already here," said General Manager Tuttle who is confident that his firm has not yet reached its peak. "It is coming this year. There is a boom in a great deal of building done in the next few years."

"Build Now" Will Boom Business and Help Jobless, Says Peters

Editor American—I understand that the Boston American is inaugurating a "Build Now" campaign and I am writing simply to express my endorsement of the movement.

I firmly believe that the present is a crucial period and if industry in all its branches is not speeded up to its full capacity this country will not be in a position to grasp the many opportunities which the end of the war will spread before it.

In addition, the movement should provide employment for those who might otherwise find difficulty in securing it, and this is of particular importance to men now being discharged from the service. It is therefore my heartiest support.

Very truly yours,
ANDREW J. PETERS,
Mayor.

of building will continue in a large way.

"We are not going to tolerate the living conditions that we have had in the past years, and the industries are going to build better houses for their workers than ever before."

I know of half a dozen big industries that are proceeding to build houses for their help. One sure fact is that industrial structures and small houses have got to be built in abundance in the near future.

Mr. Tuttle pointed out that England had led in growing houses for its industrial workers and added that the war has brought on universal understanding of the necessity for a "big product" of the war which, he said, has illustrated clearly the need of proper housing.

WORKERS WANT COMFORT.
"What the working man wants is comfort, and when he strikes for a living wage and obtains it, he does not obtain comfort, he is still a source of industrial unrest," Mr. Tuttle said.

"Employers are seeing that and are endeavoring to provide better housing. And this is contrary to the usual solution of industrial unrest."

Commenting on the fact that Massachusetts at present in the matter of building, and a recent trip which Mr. Tuttle made through the New England States, in which he covered seventy-five miles by motor, convinced him of this. In British alone five factories are in course of construction and throughout Connecticut, he said, "there was an astonishing amount of dwelling house building."

The real building boom, however, is centered in the Middle West. Detroit has spent $25,000,000 on housing in order to increase industrial capacity, and in some of the biggest areas here, he said, there have been more than 50,000 new houses built in the last few years.

"Detroit," he said, "is the one city that sees the situation clearly, but the boom is coming this way. There is little chance of prices of materials falling."

or cost of building construction is rising. I do not know of any one who is in a position to know, so says that prices will take a serious drop in the next two or three years. For that reason I say in building residences or mercantile structures, those who get in early will avoid the rush."

FREDRICKS BOOK BY JULY.
Joseph H. Fredricks, president of the Federal Trust Company, was of the opinion that Boston would be in the midst of a big building boom by July. "Just as soon as the people realize that everything has to start from new—a higher level, everything the building line will be started from the bottom."

I look for that, by the way, at the latter middle of July. Already people are beginning to realize the necessity of building new, and that it cannot wait and consequently they have it demonstrated. There is a very thorough and practical way need for more houses."

F. C. Alexander, a contractor in office in the Old South Building, pressed the viewpoint that the solution of the problem of government loans would have a great effect on the building situation and would level the standard that has been for some time past.

"A big boom is coming—in fact has already started," said Mr. Alexander. "Now that the loan is done and over with the people are beginning to build. The loan, on the other hand, will know better use they stand and will be prepared to make loans for building operations."

"For labor, I know that it will be more efficient," he said. "Mr. Alexander made the firm prediction that rents are on the rise. 'Rents will go up and continue to go up,' he said. 'There have gone up in proportion to the cost of labor and materials. I expect rents will soon be 50 per cent. up from what they were four or five years ago.'"

His opinion expressed in general by contractors may come as a consolation to builders and the public. He said that the price of materials and the wages of labor will be the same as always as prices have been the same since the war.

FINAL ACTION BEFORE SUNDAY.
The final conclusion and a definite course of action will be reached upon by the German plenipotentiaries today. The signing of the terms, which was scheduled for this morning, was called off just as some of the plenipotentiaries began arriving.

The German delegation sent word that further communications which it will address to the allies were not yet ready. The committee which is drafting the terms was not yet ready with its documents and there was, therefore, no business to be done today.

The members then turned their individual attention to a multitude of matters, with the Italian question uppermost in the minds of the American delegates. President Wilson heard a lengthy report from Ambassador Thomas Nelson Page, who recently arrived from Rome, and then the White House this afternoon. There were held in the morning. Eight bells for the mid-watch
The bells for the mid-watch are being rung in the city hall.

JUST mention coffee to the men in the service and watch them smile. These brave fellows have endured long hours of hard labor with little rest. They have forced nature to the breaking point.

Coffee helped them. It cheered them and comforted them. Very often it actually sustained them. Its warmth rested and steadied them, and so gave them new courage for the great tasks ahead.

You men and women in every day life, waging the battle of business, striving to maintain place and power and health—you have great tasks, too. And you find coffee a real help in the day's work.

And the joy of it—the charm of it—the delight of it. It greets you at breakfast—it cheers you at luncheon—it revives you at dinner. And very often regales you at the late supper. Truly—what would your life be without coffee?

CHARLEY DANCE DEFENDED BY MRS. GARY

New York, May 12.—While Rev. Dr. John Joseph Straton of the Catholic Church denounced the dance as a "sinful and wicked" thing, Mrs. Gary, wife of the president of the United States Steel Corporation, and a host of others, however, made a staunch defense of the act.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., chairman of the ball, which was given a week ago for the "Big Sister's" charity, refused to answer Dr. Straton.

The ball was patronized by New York's most prominent society to raise money for the protection of children and girls brought into the juvenile court.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., leads the "Big Sister's" Committee for Catholic Children. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, the Committee for Protestant Children and Mrs. Sidney C. Borg, the Committee for Jewish Children. All three declined to comment on the minister's tirade.

Members of the committee and counter-claimants were asked to identify the pastor's severe condemnation of the ball. They agreed upon a policy of silent contempt.

Mrs. E. J. H. Gary, a patron of the charity socials of society, made this reply to Dr. Straton:

"The minister seems to have forgotten that the people of this land have given and are giving for charity of all kinds. It is not easy to set money for charity, and when it is given, it is a pleasant evening in return. But it is very easy to condemn. There are people everywhere today caring for everything."

"It is such an easy thing to do. But I think it is exceedingly hard. It is hard to give for your own belief to believe in the opinion of the minister of religion and to give nothing in the dance to merit the pastor's criticism."

"Perhaps the Rev. Dr. Straton is not accustomed to seeing women in evening dress. People are likely to find fault with the unfamiliar. I bought a table for the Red Cross, but I could not attend."

Mrs. Mortimer L. Schiff, a patroness of the ball, said:

"The ball was a very beautiful and wonderful success. The tableaux were creations of art. I did not see anything that possibly could be misconstrued or anything unbecoming in the least."

"There always are some people who will criticize anything new, any progression from the old stereotyped forms of amusement or charity work."

IRISHMEN'S VISIT FAILS TO BRING WITH HOPE, SAYS DE VALERA

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE.
(Universal Service Staff Correspondent. Special Wireless Dispatch.)

Dublin, May 13 (via London).—"In the visit of the American delegates the Irish people see a great sign that the American people meant what they said when they went to war; to uphold the rights of the weak nations."

"Their coming was hailed almost as that of liberators by devoted souls. It injected into the Irish people new determination, new hope and greater confidence in their struggle for liberty. If in our time liberty is not achieved we will yet be content with having done all we could in transmitting the light to the succeeding generation."

Solemnly, almost with religious reverence, Edward de Valera, first president of the Irish republic, pronounced these words during the course of a lengthy interview—the first he has granted an American journalist since his sensational escape from Lincoln jail last winter.

In the course of conversation he reviewed all of Ireland's aspirations and his own hopes for the future. He said that the eyes of an old Irish seer into the future.

"The Irish man is calm, calculating, he is not a man of the moment. He will fight but he will not surrender. He will not surrender until he has won the right to live."

The movement, led by Governor Henry J. threatened fight against Pursons and Warren would not be carried beyond next Wednesday a Republican senatorial conference if it developed to any extent in conference at all.

It was also believed that the Progressives, realizing that they could not outmaneuver Pursons' defeat with out jeopardizing Republican control of the Senate had virtually agreed to the old guard proposal that Senator Johnson be made presiding officer of the Senate as a recognition of the Progressive wing of the Republican party, with which Johnson is prominently identified.

Washington, May 12.—Conference between old guard and Progressive Republicans of the Senate resulted in the following compromise: Johnson, had conferred with Chairman Senate Finance Committee, California, Progressive, for president pro tem of the Senate.

Senator Warren, Wyoming, old guard, Chairman Senate Military Affairs Committee, had conferred with Senator Lodge at the latter's residence. It is claimed that he met the Senator woman in New York in 1915. He was taken to court.

Filet's The firecracker and the arc-light

VALUE-GIVING is too often like the firecracker. It flashes, it smokes, it flares and it's all over!

Filet's values are like an arc-light: they burn brightly day in and day out. No flashes and resultant burning out.

Filet's values play no favorites. They are for everybody. You do not need to leave your house—run for a car to get here before they are gone.

We put every ounce of our strength into giving good values every day. We place them carefully, use every trade condition to make them better.

One of the contributing causes to our value giving is the fact that the cost of our goods is separated from the cost of merchandise.

You pay for merchandise alone. Then if you want service you buy it just as you do any other commodity.

The result? Filet's values! Filet's values without deliveries or charge accounts; or Filet's values WITH THESE SERVICES. Take your choice, but FILET'S VALUES in either case.

PADEREWSKI—PREMIER OF POLAND The Man Who Astonished the World First as a Musical Genius—Now as Nation Maker Takes Nuxated Iron for Strength, Energy and Endurance

Dr. Kenneth K. MacAlpine, for 16 years Adjunct Professor New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, Says That in His Opinion Nuxated Iron is the Most Valuable Tonic, Strength and Blood Builder Any Physician Can Prescribe

When Ignace Jan Paderewski, Master Pianist and Nation Maker, turned his back to the plaudits of the admiring thousands and retired into his private life, he gave his whole energy that Poland might become a free nation.

He realized the tremendous strain which would be imposed upon his health and strength. After two years of such strenuous work and intense mental effort as would have worn down the constitution of many men, Paderewski had recourse to the sustaining tonic benefits Nuxated Iron to help rebuild his wasted forces and restore his declining health and strength. That one of the foremost and most successful figures of today's international life should come out frankly and publicly endorse a product which he has personally found valuable for building up the health and strength must arouse the interest of every thinking person in Nuxated Iron, which is today being used by over three million people daily to help create red blood, power and endurance.

Commencing upon the use of Nuxated Iron, Paderewski's health began to improve. He was able to resume his work and his health was restored. He was able to resume his work and his health was restored.

Dr. Kenneth K. MacAlpine, a prominent New York Surgeon and President of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, says:

"During sixteen years as Lecturer and Adjunct Professor of Special Surgery (Proctology) in New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, I have had numerous cases of Nuxated Iron. I have seen many cases of Nuxated Iron. I have seen many cases of Nuxated Iron."

BRITT AT BEST FOR VALGER BATTLE

Ringside's Selections.
Frankie (Young) Britt to beat Benny Valger.
Fredde Lewis to beat Phil Christie.
Leon O'Brien to beat Al Lane.
Henry Reynolds to beat Mickey Snyder.

Frankie (Young) Britt, New England's leading lightweight, will receive one of the hardest tests of his career when he clashes with Benny Valger, French Plain, in a twelve-round bout at the Armory A. tonight.

The New Bedford boxer has been boxing at a merry clip during the past six months. His aggressive style of fighting combined with his ability to take a healthy punch to the jaw or stomach, have enabled him to crush all opposition.

There is always plenty of action when Britt is one of the principals. From the time the bell sounds at the opening of the first round until the contest ends, he is forcing the issue. Few are the boxers who can stand up before his style of fighting.

He sold body blows usually slow up his opponent by the time the halfway point is reached. Frankie then goes out and finishes with a burst of speed which usually gives him the victory.

WITH THE SCHOLBOYS

John M. Hayes, one of the stars on last Fall's High School of Commerce eleven, will enter Easter next Fall. He comes from a family of athletes. Johnny Hayes, the former Marathon runner, being his cousin. After completing his course at Easter, Hayes intends to go to Yale.

Jim Hickey, high school of Commerce sprinter, and Bill Nolan, East Boston High star, are bound to furnish an interesting race to the 320 at the Stadium Saturday. Nolan is the favorite to win but Hickey will make him stop his best.

John Freney, high jumper from English High, will furnish some real competition for the others in the event. His work indoors this past season has been exceptionally good.

Pete Walsh, 100-yard runner from Dorchester High and captain of next year's track team, is sure to be well up at the finish of the 100.

Paul Steiner, John Quinn will be the best bet of Boston Latin both should place in the middle-distance events.

Bob Killy will not get the chance to prove he is a better pitcher than Fred Sawyer. Sawyer will not be in the box against him, so the question of superiority will have to remain in doubt a little longer.

McCarthy, shortstop on Mark Twain at John's Prep team, is performing in great style. His work both in the field and at bat are features of every game.

Ted Palmer, shortstop on St. John's team, is showing he is a true star as a player as well as a manager. He is a character man playing on the football, basketball, track, basketball and baseball teams.

The Kemp stars around the initial bag as if he was born with one foot on the left side of the plate.

He also wields a stiff stick from the left side of the plate.

Quelotte, first catcher on St. John's team, is showing he is a true star as a player as well as a manager. He is a character man playing on the football, basketball, track, basketball and baseball teams.

GEORGE OWEN, NEWTON HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL, FOOTBALL AND TRACK.

GEORGE OWEN plays in outfield on the Newton High School nine and occasionally takes a crack at pitching or playing in the outfield.

He is also one of the best hitters on the team. His work on the football eleven had play and the track team was of the same high grade as his ball playing.

This is his last year at the school and he will enter college in the fall.

He is a character man playing on the football, basketball, track, basketball and baseball teams.

Savings Bank Act Justifies Referendum Demand

Their Depositors Should Rise Against It in Their Own Protection

It is proposed to have a referendum upon the act "To authorize savings banks, institutions for savings, and trust companies having savings departments, to place deposits on interest monthly." An examination of this law justifies the demand for a referendum to the people of the State upon it.

This title is so misleading that it is a fair assumption that the title was intended to deceive the public. It purports to be a law permitting the granting of interest to savings banks depositors. In reality it is a law limiting, arbitrarily limiting, unnecessarily limiting, deceitfully limiting the right of the savings banks to pay interest to their depositors at times most fair and convenient to the depositors. It is apparently an attempt by certain savings banks and trust companies to eliminate the competition of other savings banks and trust companies which are willing to give their depositors fairer and more convenient interest payments.

The American cannot understand why any savings bank or trust company which chooses to do so may not make its interest payments every month. Obviously, this is advantageous and fair and convenient to the depositors. We have always believed that the loss of interest by a depositor, if he withdraws the whole or part of his deposit any time within the six months interest period, was a hardship and more or less of an extortion by the bank. There is no reason in the world why a trust company or a savings bank which is willing to do so should not make its interest payments once a month, so that if a depositor, by reason of death or sickness or for any other reason, chooses to withdraw the whole or part of his deposit he may do so without losing a whole six months' interest. The loss of interest through the necessity of withdrawing deposits during the six months interest period must be perfectly enormous in this State.

If we understand the purport of this bill correctly, it is one of the boldest attacks upon the great interests of the saving people of Massachusetts that has been recently made. The savings bank depositors have always been the subjects of exploitation by the financial interests of this State. Their funds have been used time and time again for unjustifiable investments, and then when the speculation went awry the financial interests would raise a great clamor to protect the widows and orphans among the savings bank depositors by palming off the loss, not upon themselves who were responsible for it, but upon the general public.

All of our big city banks control, through the cohesion of interest among directors, a chain of savings banks. The directors of the savings banks will be let into financial deals or other favorable exchanges with the directors of the big banks, and in return they permit the use of their depositors' money for these financial deals in which the bigger banks are interested. Of course, a great majority of these deals are legitimate, but a great many are not.

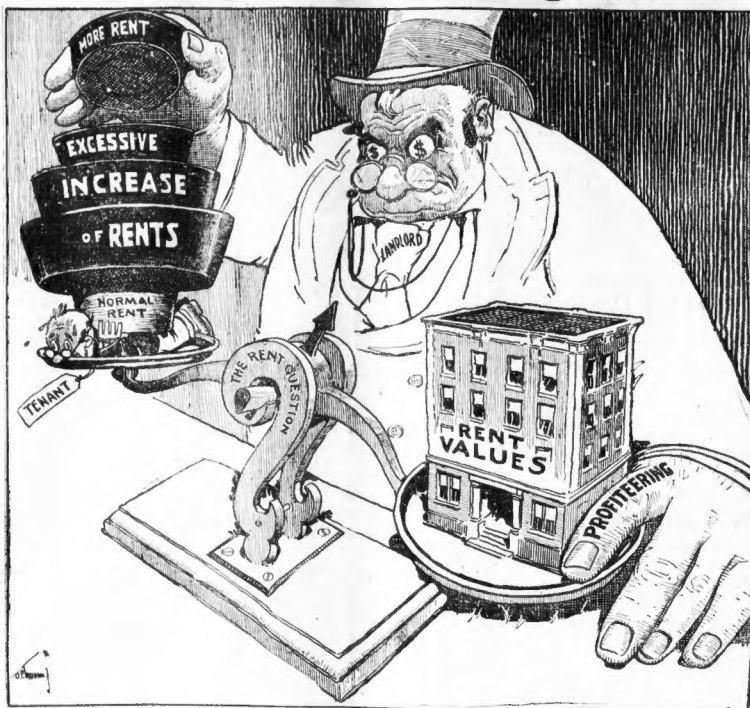

A bank or a financial house will underwrite for an enormous fee a stock or bond issue of some big corporation. It will then turn about and divide these bonds up among the different savings banks, saying to the directors of one savings bank, "You buy so many bonds or so much stock," and to the directors of another savings bank, "You buy so much," and to another savings bank, "You buy so much." The control of these savings banks deposits means a very great financial power and is the source of stupendous profit.

Let us repeat an illustration of the injury which this bill will cause the people of Massachusetts who have money in the savings banks. There are some savings banks and trust companies which pay interest every month. Those who have money deposited in these banks are able to withdraw their money in case they need it at any time, and only lose less than a month's interest. On the other hand, depositors who have money in banks which pay interest only once in six months, lose their interest for a whole half year if they are obliged at any time within the six months period to withdraw a whole or part of their money. Now the savings banks and trust companies which pay interest every month appear to be gaining a large number of depositors, and the banks which pay interest only once in six months appear to be trying by this law to prevent any bank from paying interest more often than once in six months.

We are at loss to know what argument can possibly be made in favor of this law. It strikes us as a most impudent and stupid performance. Impudent because it is so unjustifiable, and stupid because it has been passed since the people acquired the great power of compelling the referendum of such laws to their own judgment.

The American suggests that this law be repealed this year so that the people be spared the task of voting it on the referendum. In the meantime, petitions for a referendum ought to be signed, so that all will be in readiness to exercise the power of referendum on the bill this Fall.

The Heavy Finger and High Rents

THE TOWN GOSSIP

By K. C. B.

WHOEVER it was, AND IF it could have spoken.
WHO LIVED in the house, THE LANGUAGE of words.
BEFORE WE came, I'D HAVE told them both.
THEY MUST have liked birds, THAT THE southern house.
FOR ON the veranda, WAS THE better house.
ARE A couple of boxes, BUT AS it happened.
NAILED HIGH up, IT TURNED out all right.
AND AWAY from the cat, FOR AFTER a while.
AND IN each of the boxes, THE ANGRY tones.
IS A little door, CHANGED TO peaceful tones.
JUST ABOUT big enough, OF THE two little birds.
FOR A little bird, AS THEY sat on the edge.
AND YESTERDAY in my work, AND THEN I was sure.
I STOPPED for a while, THAT THEY had agreed.
AND WATCHED two weas, ON THE southern house.
WHILE THEY scolded me, AND I knew it was true.
BETWEEN THE times, THAT THEY flew back and forth.
FROM ONE little bird home, TO THE other bird home.
AND IT seemed to me, THAT WHATEVER it was.
THAT WHATEVER it was, THEY WERE talking about.
WHEN THEY began, WAS WHETHER or not.
IT WAS perfectly safe, SO CLOSE to a man.
SO CLOSE to a man, AND APPARENTLY.
THEY FIGURED it out, THAT I was all right.
FOR ALL at once, THEY CHANGED their tones.
AND LEFT me alone, AND BEGAN to quarrel.
AND ONE little bird, SEEMED TO like the house.
AT THE southern end, AND THE other bird.
WAS MOST impressed, WITH A little bird house.
AT THE southern end, I THANK you.

ADVERTISING YOUR OWN MERITS

Has it ever been suggested to your mind that you may be, unwittingly, playing into the hand of a man in your place of employment, because of the way you let him impose on you to appear before your superiors as a man of more value to the firm than you are.

You believe that your greater ability must be apparent and realized by those in authority. Perhaps it is, and perhaps not.

If you allow another to take credit which is your due and permit the other fellow to be constantly at the forefront, gaining the attention of those higher up while you sit back and wait for recognition, you are going to lose out.

Look after your own interests; don't allow the more pushing fellows to crowd you off the earth, as they will if you give no resistance.

You have boosted the cause of some one else aptly; now get in and boost yourself to the place you deserve by presenting your goods and delivering them in the best way to become known.

Letters to the Editor

"Lawless or Loyal?"

Editor Boston American:

At the annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of Boston held in the famous Washington, led by the famous Washington, made war because it became apparent to all that "resistance" had become "morality."

No one believes that the Episcopal bishops of the South have not known of the injustice perpetrated in that section of the country upon the negroes, who are denied their civic rights' guarantee them under the provisions of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution.

Not one of the Episcopal bishops, either in pulp or convention, has raised his voice to champion the rights of citizenship of the South negroes. If the people who are hostile to the operation of the eighteenth amendment are to be legally compelled to observe its mandate, there seems to be no good reason why those hostile to the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments should not be compelled to respect their rights.

MAGIC POWER IN THE EYES OF SMALL CHILDREN

By Winifred Black

DEAR me, what a time she was having this morning at the table!

I saw her at breakfast in the big hotel. A little bit of a girl.

She had a gorgeous lot of red hair and it was combed and brushed until it shone like satin, and it was curled and tied with a lovely ribbon, just the color of her hair, the big, amber-colored eyes, and her little feet were encased in little brown shoes, and, as I said, she had great brown eyes, with amber lights in them, and little, chubby hands, and she was so excited to think she was sitting at a table in such a great, big room, with so many people in it that she couldn't eat a bit.

She tried her very best. But how could she eat with a woman right opposite her, who had little dangling earrings that shimmered when the light fell on them? And who could that cross-looking man be and what was he asking? And the waiter, what a grand person he was, with so much white shirt showing—and how he could bow! Why, he looked exactly like the little man in the Punch and Judy show.

Has She Forgotten?

What a lot of silver and glass there was, to be sure, and do you suppose those plates were solid gold? It must be a very rich man who owns such a big dining-room.

Yes, Where did he get all the money, do you suppose, and had he any little girls at home, and did they ever get money at having so many people around all the time?

All this it was quite plain to see the little girl thought. And her father sat very still opposite her without a word.

He was reading the newspaper all about the peace conference, and what the Japanese might do, and who was in Russia, and why the Germans ought to be starved, and—yes, he was interested in the Japanese fight, or he tried to be. But every once in a while he looked across the table at the little girl, and then his face was very different. It was serious and sad, and yet quite happy, too. It was easy to see that he was the little girl's father, and that he was very proud of her and loved her very, very dearly.

I wonder if he combed her amber hair himself, or if he had a maid to do it. I hope he helped a little, anyway, because you couldn't, at the little girl when she looked at him without seeing that she thought her father was the nicest, kindest, proudest and dearest man in the world, and wondered how anybody lived who didn't have a man like that for her daddy.

Wonder how she liked it. I wonder, the mother of the little girl with the great amber eyes?

Does she sleep somewhere in the brown earth, and does she ever come again to see her little girl?

Or has she forgotten all about her, as a woman I know has done, lost away in the fog of her own vanity? Oh, how can she live, how can she live, haunted by the memory of the child she has deserted, knocking at her heart!

Light in Darkness

When they went out of the dining room—the tall, handsome, successful looking, youngish man and the beautiful little girl—not a pair of eyes but followed them wistfully and with a kind of anxious regard.

How would we all miss the eyes of a little child! Why, they are like a lamp in a darkened room, and they are like a star in a cloudy sky.

I for one wouldn't want to live a minute in a world where there were no children—would you?

DO APES MAKE "CHAIN" BRIDGES?

Travelers and school books for 300 years have told of the way monkeys have of making "monkey chain" bridges, for crossing crocodile-infested streams, and a professor judged, who has been investigating their activities, to determine if monkeys can find no actual proof that the monkeys could make bridges. Let Fools Talk—W. W. Dollar Worth 50 Cents One Headed Eagle German Marks for U. S. A.

By Arthur Brisbane

Methodists are to have a new sermon, with no alcohol, but much "holiness." Not liking the degraded word "saloon," they offer a reward for a substitute. What would you suggest?

They do not want words like "Remorse," "Desert," "Tantalus," "Chosen People," or anything so serious. They want a gay, cheerful word. Send suggestions before June 20 to Columbus, Ohio. Reward $5.

The government has one hundred million cans of beef and fifty million pounds of bacon, surplus army supplies. This will be sent to Europe, and distributed there, the U. S. standing the loss, to protect backers against a drop in price here.

The government owns thousands of automobiles and motor trucks for which it seems to have little use. Many are rusting in storage. They are held to prevent the drop in prices that would come if they were auctioned off.

Industries should be protected, but the people also are being considered. There ought to be some way of letting Americans have just beef and bacon and motor cars. They could be well used here.

Woodrow Wilson tells the French Academy of Arts and Sciences that he believes in letting the fool talk—for "then the secret is out and the world knows that he is a fool." In addition to that, there is the matter of gratitude. If there are fewer fools in the world there would be more opportunities for the other sort.

Barbers are striking; the express men, white paper makers and many others. Four dollars for eight hours, with plus a dollar is the rate in New York State. All workers have had their pay increased and are asking more.

And no one knows how all this given the heart of the matter has never done any harder work than signing a check. He believes that very still opposite her without a word.

But he will have to get used to it. Wars make men grow impatient and increase their pay always—fortunately.

Ebert, President of the German Republic, says he believes in unfurling a new banner inscribed with Wilson's fourteen points, "which," he says, "he believes Wilson seems to have deserted."

The new German banner officially adopted as the flag of Germany, with a streak of yellow, black and a streak of yellow. You might think the Germans themselves would object to it.

The Austrian eagle used to have two heads, one representing Austria, the other Hungary. A bill is introduced to show the eagle and show the single headed bird, on his head a crown and a sword, and a scythe, emblem of agriculture; a hammer in the other, emblem of industry.

Many flags and eagles have changed their complexion in the last few months. The world pays more attention to symbols and banners, less to deeds, to the scorpions, etc. It still retains full respect for the stick figure.

In honor of the peace treaty Germany declares that on every morning with all their closed. This, it was said, would be useful in checking the crane for gambling, that has broken out in Germany.

With the New York Stock Exchange selling more than a million shares in two hours on a Saturday, we may need a week or month of mourning over here. Among those gambling, the innocent lambs will wear lots of mourning later on.

They are very bluish now. You read the casual suggestion in this column that it would be well to hold oil stocks. The kind that represents real oil wells, not printing presses. That advice still holds.

The dollar today is worth fifty cents in a poker game when you throw great masses of chips on the table the game is over. This country has been printing hundreds of millions of Federal Reserve notes—the crowd of commerce and industry. It is going to be a big wide open game for the next two or three years, perhaps longer. After that, the world will settle down and begin to pay for the big debt.

Meanwhile, do not put anything off because you are looking for lower prices in material or labor. You won't get them and Heaven knows you are caught for it out on the waters of speculation or industrial enterprise. The storm breaks. You will never forget.

The Dutch papers are bitter on the subject of war, naturally, as they get kicks from both sides. The Rotterdam Courant says, "The treaty does not end the war. It continues it forever." Human nature does not change. The humorously entitled peace treaty will simply make it difficult for the belligerents to breathe apella between wars.
